

HEROES DEFEAT INVADERS, SAVE THE MOON

Earth's satellite kept secured as two superhumans sacrifice themselves during alien base assault

A vicious attack to our planet's satellite by space invaders was thwarted by the valourous deeds of a special team of US Forces. The team reached the Moon aboard an experimental space plane to discover a secret base made by the same aliens responsible of the attack to the White House in the previous days. Apart from two, the identity of the members of the team is unknown and it's unconfirmed whether they were supehuman as well.

Initial reports on the site revealed that the aliens had rigged the Moon's core with a powerful electromagnetic reactor, who disabled the rotation of the satellite. This would have caused the Moon to stop in its orbit, with disastrous consequences on the Earth's tides and environment. The effort of the special operation team sent out on the satellite was able to reverse the effect and avoid the catastrophe, unfortunately at the cost of the lives of two members of the team.

The superhumans, whose real identity was never made public, also foiled the alien attack to our President. Lighting superhero known as The Railgun died in a reactor explosion on the base while attempting to reactivate it, while Blue Blur, whose ultrafast run put the Moon's rotation back to its course, was launched into space after the impressive feat, rendering the retrieval of the body impossible. The two had taken part in the US Army operations in France in addition to their Justice Force partners Powertank and Dr Titanium, who could not be reached for comments.

"They may have died, but they did not die in vain" said General P. Treister, who coordinated the Government operation in the assault at the alien base. "The invaders represented a menace, but now we sent them back to were they came from. We will continue to work with known superhumans who are willing to fight for their country and make it a safer place in these times of war". Read more at page 2
